5.1 Guide to the Western Australian legislation review schedule

Legislation review

In June 1996, the Western Australian Government published its Legislation Review Table. Since that time there have been some changes, primarily adding to the schedule. The current timetable now lists 309 pieces of legislation for review.

Western Australia published Legislation Review Guidelines in April 1997. These guidelines are based on the CPA and provide a step-by-step guide to conducting legislation reviews. The guidelines highlight the importance of independent oversight of reviews and of affording interested parties the opportunity to contribute to the review process.

Progress to 31 December 1998

At the end of 1998, recommendations from 92 reviews had been presented to the Government for consideration. Recommendations from 43 reviews had been implemented: 15 Acts were repealed entirely and restrictions were retained in 28 Acts. In addition, the Government had endorsed the recommendations from a further 45 reviews, and was drafting legislation for implementation by the year 2000.

Highlights of the program to date include:

- Repeal of the Bread Act 1982 removed a number of onerous restrictions, including licensing requirements for bake-houses, restrictions on the time at which bread could be delivered and requirements for marking vehicles used for delivery.
 - Removal of several restrictions, under the Betting Control Act 1954, enabled bookmakers to compete with the Totalisator Agency Board on a more level footing.
 - Exclusive licences to provide port services such as towage, piloting and stevedoring can be granted only by the responsible Minister who must consider whether public benefits from exclusivity exceed public costs.
 - The review of the Chicken Meat Industry Act 1977 and associated Regulations recommended that the legislation be amended to allow broiler growers to negotiate contracts with processors outside the existing compulsory collective contract system. The review found that a voluntary collective contract arrangement was in the public interest because it offered protection to broiler growers from the strong market position of the two large chicken meat processors in Western Australia.

- The review of the Finance Brokers Control Act 1975 and associated Regulations recommended that the Act be repealed on the grounds that a less restrictive code of conduct would be equally as effective in protecting consumers as the current arrangements and would reduce compliance costs for finance brokers. It was also noted that the Act duplicated provisions contained within the Commonwealth Trade Practices Act 1974 and the Fair Trading Act 1987.
- The current system of mandatory licensing, under the Painters Registration Act 1961, was found to be too restrictive. The review of the Act recommended that certification be supported by a system of negative licensing, allowing for the removal from the industry of persons who do not adhere to basic standards of commercial conduct.
